The Liberal Catholic Church U.S.A

2016 International Congress

"To See Thy Life in All the Peoples of Thine Earth"

February 8-14

Welcome... to the Liberal Catholic Church, Province of the United States, and the 2016 International Congress held in conjunction with the General Episcopal Synod 15 and Centennial celebration of the founding of the LCC.

Our theme for this Congress is:

*To See Thy Life in All the Peoples of Thine Earth
The LCC as a Liturgical Community in the Twenty-First Century*

Through facilitated discussions and presentations Tuesday through Friday, we seek to answer three primary questions:

- How can the LCC message of inclusiveness, mysticism, and community building be more efficiently communicated by the Church to the world?
- What is the role of the Sacraments in furthering Spiritual Freedom?
- What does it mean to be a Liberal Catholic in today's world?

Thank you for joining us in what we hope will be for you inspiring, enlightening, and enjoyable as well.

THE RT. REV. WILLIAM S. DOWNEY

International Congress Opening

11:00-11:30 Introduction and Launch (Sandia I)

The Rev. T-Metz, Church of St. Francis
Villa Park, IL USA

Purpose: To launch a collaborative effort and ensure consensus around the Thematic Purpose, scope, deliverables, administrivia, and method.

11:30-1:00 Within TLCC, the difference between "occult" and "mystical", who cares, and so what? (Sandia I)

The Rev. Richard Taylor, St. Michael's on the Gold Coast
Queensland, Australia

To re-examine the Christian expression which our founding bishops articulated 100 years ago and where we find ourselves today. Drawing on long-standing mystical traditions and contemporary scholarship in a number of areas, and with the help of participants, restating a vision for TLCC that will resonate with us so that a nucleus of internationally-connected practitioners will work together. With the Liturgy as the base, develop the knowledge and methods for spiritual development on the Path which enables practitioners to walk with increasing confidence and purpose in our rapidly changing world.

Reconnecting with the founding bishops' vision through the lens of contemporary scholarship (forensic examination of early manuscripts, neural cognition, physics, and cosmology) and eastern spiritual Masters now living in the West.

Thematic Alignment: TLCC can provide people with a spiritual Path within a Christian tradition that combines knowledge, practice, and instructions on how to progress along the Path. What results for practitioners is a life of meaning with ever-increasing depths of richness, satisfaction, and contentment—a likely component of our vision and mission.

2:00-4:00 Tradition, History, and Liberal Catholic Identity
(Sandia I)

The Rev. Doug Bess, St. Alban's Church
Los Angeles, CA USA

A critical examination of some of the rather simplistic distortions of ecclesiastical self-understanding that have manifested themselves within the history of TLCC, resulting occasionally in either "in-house" quarreling or even schism. This is especially true regarding the self-understandings of many within TLCC as its being either a theosophical body with a “Christian veneer,” or a mystical Christian body with some theosophical “historical curiosities” of language that are contained in its liturgy and praxis. Using two key moments in the history of TLCC as the focal point – (1) the controversies among theosophists surrounding the founding of TLCC, and (2) the major schism that occurred in the 1940’s. An analysis of the role that tradition and history plays in identity formation and an exploration whether a “middle path” is possible between Christianity and theosophy, and, if so, how it would manifest itself in TLCC during the second century of its mission to forward the work of the Master Christ.

11:00-1:00 Stone Upon Stone: Building Membership with TLCC Heritage of Wisdom - Part 1 of 2 (Sandia I)

The Rev. Thomas and Donna Miller, St. Gabriel and All Angels
Fairfield, IA USA

This is a two-part workshop and interaction for clergy and church boosters who wish to increase enthusiastic membership in their parishes or missions. Practical steps for reaching spiritual seekers will be shared. An outline will be presented of a “mini-course” format, a 3-meeting introductory series on TLCC for prospective and new members, that has been used at St. Gabriel and All Angels for decades. “The Angel Lecture” outline will be presented. Learn the seven surefire experiences that will inspire your congregation year after year. Attendees will participate in a “what works” sharing session based on successful experiences in their churches. Attendees will receive packets of outlines, publicity samples, and a surprise cache of high quality TLCC video programs useful for study groups.

1:00 PM Lunch in Sandia II

Greek Salad

2:00-4:00 In Him as the Transcendent Glory All Things Live and Move and Have Their Being (Sandia I)

The Very Rev. Alan Clute, St. Michael the Protector
Mountainair, NM USA

Interactive discussion on the nature of reality as revealed by modern physics. We will examine the expression of Divine Intelligence revealed in the invisible “Natural Law”—the most important component in the construction of our universe—as we discuss the Glory of our heritage, the incredible dynamism within all creation, and the insistent force of evolution and God’s Love as expressed in all of humanity.

Thematic Alignment: Religion has for too long been seen to be at odds with science, but TLCC provides a viewpoint and an understanding which creates a comfortable intellectual home for the scientist or engineer. For those with scientific eyes to see, Divine Intelligence is everywhere.

4:00-6:00 A Christianity Christ-Centered and Non-Exclusive (Sandia I)

The Rev. Robert Elwood, Our Lady and All Angels
Ojai, CA USA

This presentation will show how Christian life can be fully centered on Christ as the incarnate Word of God, experiencing the richness of divine grace through faith and sacrament, without denigrating other religions, and indeed learning from them. That will be demonstrated with the Sermon on the Mount and the parable of the judgement in Matt. 25 especially, where the point is not believing in Jesus in some exclusive theological way, but praying that the Kingdom of God come and living in a Christlike way, which includes willingness to see and learn from the faith of the Romans, Samaritans, and others, as was Jesus. We aspire to serve the many people today drawn to spirituality and to Jesus, but are put off by what seems to them the arrogant exclusivity of many churches.

Thematic Alignment: This discussion will help us lift out and see divine life in all the peoples of the earth, and to live in a way that demonstrates our seeing of it.

2:00-3:00 Putting Google No-Cost Programs to Work for Your Church (Sandia I)

Tami Steelman-Gonzales, St. Raphael
Richmond, CA USA

A brief “how to” session for: Google Mail, Docs (including shared templates for printing, presentations, invitations, programs, bookkeeping, flyers, marketing and more), Voice, +, Circles, Video Conferencing, Map location, and Analytics. Google Account setup in the workshop (bring your laptop or use one that will be provided during the weekend).

3:00-4:00 An Introduction to the Christian Kabbalah

The Rev. Edward Gonzales, St. Raphael
Richmond, CA USA

To introduce the mysteries of the Kabbalah, and how it has been the source of revelation for Christian mystics. After a brief introduction to the ideas of the Kabbalah, as well as its motifs, there will be a discussion as to how this ancient school of mystic thought came to inspire Christians who sought within its arcane symbols hidden secrets of God's Word.

Thematic Alignment: The Christian Kabbalah can be a source of mystic revelation. It is a foundation for all those who would build a spiritual temple, and a ladder leading to Heaven.

4:00-6:00 Call to Action (Sandia I)

The Rev. T-Metz, Church of St. Francis,
Villa Park, IL USA

Walk through results and output. Note any missing items. Remind participants to refine their action plans for making TLCC as a liturgical community in the twenty-first century, a reality.

Speaker (Sandia Ballroom)*

Richard Smoley was born in Waterbury Connecticut in 1956. He attended Taft School Watertown Connecticut, and entered Harvard University in 1974. As an undergraduate, he was managing editor of the university's venerable literary magazine, The Harvard Advocate, and edited an anthology entitled First Flowering: The Best of the Harvard Advocate, 1866-1976. Featuring prefaces by Norman Mailer and Robert Fitzgerald, the book was published by Addison-Wesley in 1977. Richard went on to attend the University of Oxford in the U.K. where he edited The Pelican, the magazine of Corpus Christi College. He received his B.A. in the Honour School of Littrae Humaniores (classics and philosophy) in 1980, and received his M.A. from Oxford in 1985.

His esoteric interests started at Oxford with a small group that was studying the Kabbalah, The Jewish Book of Wisdom, the native theology and cosmology of Judaism. Starting in 1986 to present, Richard has written and lectured on the esoteric side of religion.

Richard Smoley's topic this evening is:

Celebrating 100 Years of the Liberal Catholic Church

1916-2016

The Liberal Catholic Church began with the Consecration in London, England of James Ingall Wedgwood
as the first Presiding Bishop
February 13, 1916

CONSECRATION OF JAMES INGALL WEDGWOOD

Rt. Rev. Frederick Samuel Willoughby, Rt. Rev. Rupert Gauntlett, Dean Seaton.

Standing: José B. Acuña (later Bishop), Reginald Farrer, three unidentified Servers, Theodore Bell, unidentified Priest.

The following article was printed in the February, 1966 issue of Ubiqve published on the fiftieth anniversary of the Liberal Catholic Church. The history of the LCC was written by Bishop James Ingall Wedgwood with additional commentary and notes added by Bishop William H. Pitkin.

THE BEGINNINGS OF THE LIBERAL CATHOLIC CHURCH

February 13, 1916

By Bishop James Ingall Wedgwood

Editorial Foreword:

On the occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of our Church it seems appropriate to reprint an account of its beginnings written for Ubiqve by our first Presiding Bishop in 1937. In editing for this reprint numbers (1), (2), etc. have been inserted in the text and refer to editorial notes at the end of Bishop Wedgwood's article, mostly concerning the passing on of persons then living, with other pertinent matter.

The Editor has appended some further items of historical interest, including...notes on its worldwide extension and pictures of some of its leaders.

+ William H. Pitkin.

Beginnings of the L.C.C.

The Editor has asked me to put pen to paper and write some account of the beginnings of The Liberal Catholic Church. The story has not been told in its entirety before, so I gladly do as he asks. I shall have to request the indulgence of readers if a certain amount of autobiography, or talk about oneself, enters into the narrative. The train of events is mixed up with my early life. I shall try to keep that autobiography as short as possible.

From quite an early age I was interested in the church organ. I remember being taken as a boy of about seven into an old church at Folkestone and bursting into tears when I heard the organ being played. Later at school I was given lessons in organ playing, and I began to study the complicated mechanism inside the organ and the treatment of its many kinds of pipes. Later I wrote some books on the subject, of which a Dictionary of Organ Stops has run into seven editions. Another hobby was chemistry. On leaving school I was sent, on the advice of Sir Henry Roscoe, a famous chemist of the time, to University College, Nottingham, in England, to study analytical chemistry with a view to taking it up as one's profession.

My interest in church music led me to a high Anglican Church in that town. I got deeply interested in the Catholic presentation of Christian doctrine and worship, became an altar server and started reading books on theology. The choirmaster of that church, St. Alban's, Nottingham, Dr. Beckett Gibbs, an authority on the Solesmes system of plainchant, is now (1936) in charge of the music at St. Ignatius' Episcopal Church in New York. So soon as my studies in Nottingham were finished I was sent to York Minster, one of the largest and most beautiful of the historic English cathedrals, as an articulated pupil of the organist there, Dr. T. Tertius Noble, now (1936) of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, New York. I spent four years with him. During that time I was up in the organ loft twice in the day and helped in the training of some of the junior boys in the choir. I acted as server in two high Anglican churches in succession and as choirmaster in one of them, in which the Solesmes system of plainchant was and is still used.

I finally decided to read for Holy Orders in the Church of England. But there is an old proverb: "Man proposes, God disposes". (People who think that the Devil is behind theosophy are at liberty to impute the responsibility to him!) Mrs. Besant came along to York to lecture there. I had heard her once before, at Nottingham. I said to the Vicar in whose church I was working and in whose house I was living: "I'm going to hear that woman again, but she won't get me this time." He came with me to the lecture. Three days later I joined the Theosophical Society and was summarily banished from the church. The Vicar could not have such a heretic as a church official! We are the best of friends these days, and I told him recently that he had acted in my best interest and that I now knew that I could never have been happy in the Anglican Church.

From that time forward I renounced all thought of church work and of a church career, and having just enough income on which to live decided to devote myself to work in and for the Theosophical Society. From 1911-1913 I acted as General Secretary of the Society in England and Wales, relinquishing that office to become Grand Secretary of the British Jurisdiction of the Co-Masonic Order. So much for preliminary history.

In 1913 a letter appeared in one of the London daily newspapers dealing with the habits of birds. The letter caught my eye especially because it was signed by Archbishop A. H. Mathew, of whose existence as an Old Catholic bishop in England I knew vaguely. Something impelled me to write to him to ask for particulars of the Church of which he was head. He sent a very friendly answer. The idea of taking Orders re-entered my head. I told him something of the story of my life, of my interest in church work and of the studies I had made.

During the interchange of letters which followed I was honest with him about my relation with the Theosophical Society, and as some indication of one's belief sent him a copy of Mrs. Besant's little book, Theosophy, published in the Jack series of The People's Books. He asked me to go and see him, and at once accepted me. I was re-baptized and reconfirmed by him sub conditione, given the Minor Orders, those of Subdeacon and Deacon, and finally ordained by him as priest on July 22, 1913. These ceremonies all took place in an oratory which I equipped in my rooms at 1 Upper Woburn Place, London, opposite the Headquarters of the T.S. where I worked as General Secretary. I mention details such as these because in attacks of a most unscrupulous kind which were later to follow it was alleged that I had concealed the fact of my being a Theosophist from him.

The following two years saw the ordination to the priesthood by Abp. Mathew of other members of the Theosophical Society. Their names are: Bernard Edward Rupert Gauntlett (July 1, 1914), Reginald Elphinstone Astley Loftus Farrer (August 1, 1914) and Robert

King (August 1, 1914). Rupert Gauntlett belonged to a family who owned a large paper manufactory and worked in that firm. Reginald Farrer had independent means. Robert King was and is well known as a theosophical lecturer and authority on psychic faculties. (1) Following upon these names should be mentioned that of Frederick James (April 4, 1915); he had been a member of the T.S. until the previous year. The ceremonies took place for the most part in the oratory in my house. (The dates following the names are those of ordination to the priesthood.)

At the same time as Robert King and Reginald Farrer an ex-priest of the Anglican Church, not a Theosophist, Frederick Samuel Willoughby, M.A. (Cantab.), was passed through the ceremonies from Confirmation to the Priesthood, all being administered, of course, sub conditione. He and Reginald Farrer were baptized sub conditione on the same day, July 18, 1914, in my oratory and in succession to one another, the one by Abp. Mathew, the other by myself.

Bishop King and I were discussing these events recently—we have remained close friends for nearly 30 years—and he reminded me that it was on the first anniversary of my ordination to the priesthood that I took him to Bromley in Kent to see the Archbishop, and that much of the conversation on that occasion had turned round the habits of birds, about which the old Archbishop had a wide range of information.

Another member of the Theosophical Society was also ordained at this period of the Church's history, that is, during the period of Abp. Mathew's headship, namely Theodore Bell, of Harrogate. Quakers were numerous round about Harrogate and York, and he came of a Quaker family. The parents, William and Elizabeth Bell, were leading Theosophists in Harrogate and were proprietors of the chief drapery establishment in that town. Theodore Bell was baptized by Reginald Farrer, confirmed by Bishop Willoughby, and received the several ordinations up to the priesthood (November 13, 1914) at the hands of Bishop Willoughby. He has for some years worked in the United States as a priest of the Protestant Episcopal Church and has achieved some renown in that field of work. His brother, Robert William Bell, is also well known as a priest of our

Church, serving at Tekels Park, Camberley. (2)

In the autumn of 1914 I went to Adyar, India to the Headquarters of the T.S. on the invitation of Mrs. Besant, and in the following year visited Australia. I was at the time Grand Secretary of the Order of Universal Co-Masonry for the British Jurisdiction, and I went there largely in connection with that work. It was in that year, 1915, that I had the privilege of initiating C. W. Leadbeater into Freemasonry. I talked with him about my ordination and he came to various celebrations of the Eucharist by myself. He was greatly impressed by the power for good which such ordination bestowed and with the splendid scope that the celebration offered for spreading spiritual blessing abroad on the world.

In the meantime Abp. Mathew had consecrated F. S. Willoughby as Bishop. In September 1914 he had addressed a letter to his clergy saying that in view of his advancing years it seemed to him desirable that "immediate steps should be taken to preserve the valid episcopal succession in our portion of the Church from risk of loss". The election then held resulted in the consecration of the Rev. F. S. Willoughby by Abp. Mathew on October 28, 1914. My name came second in the voting and it was understood that I was to be consecrated on my return, so that there should be bishops to the canonical number of three. It is the rule of the Church that three bishops shall officiate at an episcopal consecration. Consecration by a single bishop is valid; the rule requiring three is partly aimed against clandestine consecrations and to ensure that all shall be done coram populo. Also it is well that in a small independent movement the chain of episcopal succession shall not hang on one or even on two links.

The Old Catholic Church

At this stage of our narrative it will be fitting and most convenient to say something about the movement which Abp. Mathew represented. There is no need to write in any detail about the origin and history of the Old Catholic Church. An outline of that is given in our Statement of Principles, and the story can be read in various books which treat of church history. At the beginning of the 18th century a number of Dutch clergy centering round the Chapter of Utrecht found themselves in resistance to what they regarded as unlawful interference on the part of Rome. It is claimed on their side that they were fighting against Jesuit intrigue. They were able to secure the episcopal succession from a bishop in Roman Orders, and thenceforward maintained themselves in a state of independence from Rome. In Holland they came to be known as The Old Roman Church. They retained the Latin Rite, since their differences were at first ones of discipline and not of doctrine. The Pope was prayed for as Patriarch of the West until 1910.

The movement known as Old Catholic is of later and different origin. It dates from the time of the formulation by the Roman Catholic Church of the doctrine of Papal Infallibility, a doctrine promulgated by the Vatican Council of 1870. A number of prominent scholars on the Continent of Europe went into revolt at what they regarded as a serious innovation in doctrine. The Dutch Old Roman Church came to their aid and consecrated Prof. Reinkens of Bonn as their bishop in Germany. He in his turn consecrated a certain Dr. Herzog as bishop of the Swiss Christian Catholic Church (as they called and call themselves) in 1876. And the movement eventually spread to some other countries. There is, for instance, in U.S.A. a Polish National Catholic Church in union with Utrecht, whose first bishop, Antonius Stanislaus Kozlowski, was consecrated in 1897 by the above-named Bishop Herzog of Switzerland. He was succeeded by Bishop Francis Hodur, consecrated at Utrecht in 1907. There are other so-called Old Catholic or Old Roman Catholic Churches which are not in union with Utrecht.

I ought now to say a few words about Abp. Mathew's relations with Utrecht. On taking up work in the English movement we discovered to our surprise that the number of active adherents in that country could be counted on the fingers of one hand. Archbishop Mathew had quarrelled successively with the Dutch Church and the Anglican Church, and had lost one after another of his Auxiliary Bishops and clergy. Of this we shall speak later. It was owing to our efforts that an Oratory was opened in London in Red Lion Square and a permanent congregation gradually gathered together.

It does not fall within the range or purview of this article to discuss at any length the difficulties with Utrecht or the misunderstanding under which Dr. Mathew had been consecrated. They are dealt with in a pamphlet by myself issued in 1920 in the form of an Open Letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury and bearing the title, The Lambeth Conference and the Validity of Archbishop Mathew's Orders. It had been thought that some Roman Catholic congregations in Great Britain were proposing to join the Old Catholics and on these grounds the consecration took place. No such exodus from the Roman Church did follow.

On the discovery of the facts Bishop Mathew offered to retire into private life, but the Old Catholic bishops in a letter to the English journal, The Guardian, dated June 3, 1908, exonerated him from all complicity in the proceedings, saying that their "confidence in Bishop Mathew remains unshaken after carefully perusing a large number of documents bearing on this matter", and they commended his ministrations to the blessing of Almighty God and to the support of the English Church and people.

In 1910 Bishop Mathew broke off relations with the Old Catholics. He gave as his reason the fact that the Old Catholic Bishops had begun to tamper with the Catholic faith. As we have already seen, the Dutch Church had been most conservative in regard to changes. It was otherwise in regard to other branches of the movement. They had tampered with Catholic teaching and practice in order to find favour with and to diminish their differences with Lutheranism and Calvinism. There is to this day a good deal of difference between the Dutch Liturgy on the one hand, and the German and Swiss Liturgies on the other hand. Incense is commonly used in Holland; it is much less used in Switzerland and has almost disappeared from the German churches. And the general outlook of the Dutch Church has been affected in no small measure by the more Protestant tendencies of these other Churches. Various changes were made in the Dutch vernacular Liturgy of 1910. I mention these points to show that Abp. Mathew, as a man of thoroughly orthodox outlook, did not act as he did without some justification behind him.

Our Breach with Abp. Mathew

The real trouble with Abp. Mathew was his instability of character. He was outwardly charming and the most courteous of men, and it was difficult for one who knew him to think of him as being consciously or intentionally dishonest. But he was constantly changing his outlook on things. His mind behaved like a weathercock, blown about by the exigencies of the moment and the emotional reaction awakened by them. One of the many priests who had left him once said to me that he fixed six months as the average time that a man was likely to remain with him. Our turn came along in due course.

I was on my way back to England from Australia when I received word of two crises. One was concerned with the sudden dismissal of Bishop Willoughby from the movement in consequence of an attack made on him by a certain weekly journal noted for public arraignments of this kind. Abp. Mathew summoned him at a few hours' notice to defend himself. Bishop Willoughby declined to appear, claiming that prior to his entry into the movement he had discussed with the Archbishop quite freely the circumstances which had led him to resign his living in the Anglican Church. A farcical sentence of degradation was pronounced. The other sudden movement was that we all had been required to abjure our theosophical tenets. A priest who had been ordained by him who was not active in the movement and whom none of us had ever met had been impressing upon the Archbishop the iniquity of our beliefs. (3)

I arrived home to learn that Robert King and Rupert Gauntlett had been consecrated bishops by Bishop Willoughby. The latter was on the verge of making his submission to the Roman Church. He himself was not concerned one way or another with the doctrinal dispute. The remainder of the non-Theosophical clergy in Great Britain (with the solitary exception of the priest just mentioned) stood by us. Bishop Willoughby said that he owed his consecration to the suffrages of the clergy concerned and he regarded it as an honourable obligation to hand back to the movement the episcopate to guard and perpetuate which he had been consecrated. The two were to hold the succession in trust for me. Bishop Willoughby was still free when I got back to England. I waited four and a half months before accepting his offer of consecration. I wanted, if possible, to avoid later difficulties by obtaining the episcopate from another source. Four of those who had been consecrated by Abp. Mathew were approached by me, also a certain Bishop Vernon Herford, deriving his episcopal Orders from another line of succession altogether and who was and is concerned with the giving of Sacred Orders to Nonconformist ministers;(4) but, as had been anticipated, without success. The main reason for my reluctance to accept consecration at the hands of Bishop Willoughby was removed when he showed me his correspondence with the Archbishop which bore witness that he had been open and above-board with him. These letters are now in the files of our Church.

In the meantime the issue with Abp. Mathew had widened, and the clergy active in the movement decided to dissociate themselves from a leadership which they had come to see to be lacking in any sense of responsibility. Abp. Mathew then tendered his "unconditional submission" to the Roman Church. The announcement appeared in The Times during the last days of 1915. In a letter to a widely circulated Roman Catholic journal he expressed himself as being "absolutely and irrevocably" convinced of the necessity of actual union with the Roman See and as accepting "without hesitation or doubt" the Infallibility of the Pope (Universe, December 31, 1915). He wrote me at this time that he "terminated" the movement which he had begun. To one not acquainted with his capacity for changing his mind it would seem incredible that after so solemn and public a pronouncement he refused Rome's conditions and went through the jeu de théâtre of resuming the headship of the movement at the invitation of the priest to whom we have referred. The later movement never made any headway in this country. Abp. Mathew died in 1919.

The Re-Organization of the Church

I was myself consecrated bishop on February 13, 1916 by Bishop Willoughby, assisted by Bishops King and Gauntlett. Our Oratory was much too small for the occasion and we made use of the Co-Masonic Temple in London. There was present a large congregation, a number of whom added their names as witnesses to the Instrument of Consecration signed by the bishops. (5) In the photographs taken after the ceremony Dr. Seaton, the Dean of Abp. Mathew's Chapter, is to be seen in the front row with the bishops.

Our situation was not an easy one. We had not entered the movement with any idea of starting another Church. Nothing was further from my mind. It had been a disappointment to me that I could not enter the Anglican ministry, and when the opportunity presented itself of assuming "the sweet but heavy burden of the priesthood" under these conditions of greater freedom I gladly and happily embraced it. Had there been any thought of founding an independent church one would have taken information as to Abp. Mathew's relationship with the other Old Catholic Churches and would certainly have decided to seek opportunity elsewhere. But things were not to be so. We found ourselves in relation with a devout and earnest congregation who had learned to value greatly the spiritual privileges which the movement afforded them. Experience had shown us that inevitably we should come to grief with orthodox leadership. There was no option but to go ahead, no matter how formidable and distasteful some of the outer consequences of that course were likely to prove. The decision to carry on was therefore taken.

A few months later I was once more on my way to Sydney to take counsel with C. W. Leadbeater. The worldwide journeying was decidedly expensive, but I realized some capital in order to make it possible. Bishop King was left in charge of the work in England and admitted some good workers to the priesthood. Mr. Leadbeater saw great possibility for usefulness in the movement and placed his services unreservedly at our disposal. He was consecrated bishop on July 15, 1916, having previously received conditional baptism and confirmation and the earlier Orders, again conditionally, at my hands. (6)

There now began one of the happiest and most interesting phases of my life. The many and sundry rites of the Church were carefully studied and through these researches were laid the foundations of our existing Liturgy and of the valuable and interesting book later published by our great colleague, The Science of the Sacraments. My own studies in theology now proved useful. I was able to formulate question after question, and the principles governing the working of the holy sacraments and the offices of worship of the Church were gradually elucidated. (7)

I may mention one interesting investigation as a case in point. It turned round the question of what is called intention. The main reason why the Roman Catholic Church regards Anglican Orders as null and void is that the Reformers, according to this judgement, had no intention to ordain sacrificing priests in the Catholic sense. There lived in England in the days of my youth an ultra-Protestant Anglican Bishop of Liverpool, a certain Dr. Ryle, who carefully told his candidates before their ordination that he was not going to ordain them as sacrificing priests but purely as ministers of the Gospel. The enquiry now made showed quite clearly that the intention to do what the Church intends to be done suffices and that idiosyncrasies of personal belief do not seriously intervene in the situation. It is the good of the many which is taken into consideration, not the misplaced belief of an individual. In other words, it is not Bishop Ryle who ordains but the Lord Christ.

We agreed that in the work of the revision of the Liturgy there should be no question of departing from the general outline of Christian thought and worship. Ours was a Christian church and we intended to keep it such. And we followed the general plan of the Roman Liturgy which had been in use in our Church and which we found to be the most suitable as a basis for work. I had myself been ordained and consecrated according to the Roman rite. The book used was entitled The Old Catholic Missal and Ritual. It had been published in 1909 by Bishop Mathew and bore the imprimatur of Gerardus Gul, the Archbishop of Utrecht. It incorporated, of course, the trifling changes which distinguished Old Catholicism from Roman Catholicism. We had used this book in our general services, though in accordance with Abp. Mathew's wishes I said my private daily Mass in Latin. The forms given in this book were used for the ordination and consecration of Bishop Leadbeater—they are those found in the Pontificale Romanum.

We set to work to eliminate the many features which from our point of view disfigure and weaken the older liturgies. References to fear of God, to His wrath and to everlasting damnation were taken out, also the constant insistence on the sinfulness and worthlessness of man and the frequent appeals for mercy. The services were made as clear and free from repetition in their structural sequence as possible. And every opportunity was given to the congregation to join in the worship with all the resources of mind and will and emotion and self-dedication they were able to command. The sentiments put into the mouth of the worshipper are such as those who are filled with the spirit of devotion and service can honestly and sincerely utter. There is no need to speak further of this side of our work, for it is outlined and discussed in the Preface to our Liturgy and has been written about elsewhere.

One other change of method remains to be mentioned. The historical liturgies follow the custom of the time in identifying man with his physical body and activities. They speak of "my soul" and "my spirit". This outlook works to restrict man in the play of his faculties. It leads him to pray and ask for the gift of various virtues as though they were not inherent in him. Our method of treating man as a spiritual intelligence using a physical body leads to greater effectiveness and to far greater freedom and readiness and power of self-expression. It stresses the idea of co-operation with the Divine Father rather than that of supplication, and being outward turned in the service of God and His world soon enables a man to realize something of the boundless resources of his own being. They are his by right and not simply by grace.

This work at the Liturgy took much time and effort. Early in 1918 a small volume was published in London. It contained The Liturgy of the Mass, together with a Form for the Administration of

Holy Communion out of Mass, Form for the Communion of the Sick, the Order of Vespers and of Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament. The book was headed with the name, The Old Catholic Church and was "Prepared for the use of English speaking Congregations of Old Catholics". The complete edition of the Liturgy was published in the following year and the note authorizing its use and signed by myself is dated The Feast of St. Alban, 1919. We had by then changed the name of our Church to Liberal Catholic, and for the word Mass had substituted Holy Eucharist. Certain small alterations were made in the wording of the earlier book. There was, for instance, a phrase at the beginning of the Canon of the Mass: "We desire to offer this Holy Sacrifice in praise to Thee and that it may avail to lift the heavy burden of the sin and sorrow of the world". This was now left out. A later edition with some additions incorporated was issued in 1924. (8)

I was myself responsible for the wording of most of the forms of service. Bishop Leadbeater and I collaborated in the writing of the Collects, though he was mainly responsible for them. Bishop Leadbeater selected the verses for the psalms and canticles, and the passages serving for epistles and gospels. Mr. E. Armine Wodehouse originally wrote the lovely hymn at the end of Benediction, "Closed is the Solemn Hour", for a ceremonial movement named The Temple of the Rosy Cross, of which Mrs. Besant, Mrs. Hotchener (then Russak) and I were the principals. He wrote also the Litanies which figure in the Benediction rite and in the Forms of Ordination. These were to have been based on those to be found in Hymns, Ancient and Modern. Readers who care to look up numbers 464, 470 and 472 in that book will see that only a few sentences were actually taken from that source. These Litanies are a very beautiful and happy addition to our book of worship.

I have so far discussed changes in the Liturgy and mode of worship. One other matter calls for mention in this record of our early work. We decided to be scrupulously careful in our choice of bishops and in the circumstances of their consecration. During four years and four months Abp. Mathew had laid hands on no fewer than eight bishops, and his bishops left him and submitted to other Churches (where some of them worked as priests) as readily as did his priests. The title of Archbishop is with us set aside. It was originally decided to drop the title of Father as attached to priests. There are no longer Canons in our small ranks. And no jurisdiction is claimed in regard to territory. We have done our best to be sensible and to cast off the earlier tradition of extravagance. I was myself responsible for the writing of the Statement of Principles.

The work on the Liturgy was interrupted by a good deal of travelling about needed for the founding of our movement in different countries. This is not the place to speak of those journeys. But the following facts may be of interest. On my journey to Sydney as a newly consecrated bishop I stopped at Adelaide in South Australia and ordained to the priesthood on July 6, 1916, David Morton Tweedie, now bishop in Australia. He was the first of our men to be ordained priest in Australia. (9)

In 1917 I went to New Zealand in connection with church and Masonic work. During that visit John Ross Thomson and William Crawford were ordained priests at Auckland on February 18 and 23 respectively. Both are now bishops. (10) I returned to Sydney and on June 24, assisted by Bishop Leadbeater, consecrated to the episcopate The Jonkheer Julian Adrian Mazel. (11)

Later on in the same year I returned to England via U.S.A., staying for some time at Hollywood (12) and visiting other towns in the States and in British Columbia on the journey. The first priest to be ordained in U.S.A. was my dear and honoured friend, Charles Hampton. He was ordained at Los Angeles on August 19, 1917. Dr. Edwin Burt Beckwith of Chicago was ordained in New York on September 16, 1917. Some years later, on July 18, 1926, by courtesy of Bishop Cooper I had the honour of consecrating him bishop in the Church of St. Michael, Huizen, Holland, assisted by Bishops Cooper and Pigott. (13) Also in New York I ordained as priest Ray Marshall Wardall on October 4. He also is now a bishop. (14)

On January 18, 1918 in London I gave conditional reordination to the priesthood to Frank Waters Pigott, now our Presiding Bishop. (15)

I returned to Australia a few months later, travelling again via U.S.A. On the way through I stopped at Chicago and ordained

Edmund Walter Sheehan, now a bishop, as priest. (16)

The following year, 1919, our Liturgy as we now know it was at length published. My copy of this first edition bears on the title page the following note: "This copy was used at the consecration of the Rt. Rev. Irving S. Cooper at St. Alban's Sydney, on July 13, 1919". I had the privilege of acting as consecrator on that occasion, and was assisted at the ceremony by Bishops Leadbeater and Mazel. Bishop Cooper was the first bishop for whom the form of consecration printed in our Liturgy was used. Mazel, like Bishop Leadbeater, was raised to the episcopate according to the Roman rite. (17)

I mention these American cases, first because I am writing for an American magazine, but also because I keep in my heart a living gratitude for the unflinching kindness and warmth of welcome which was everywhere shown to me in your country. Bishop Cooper's presence at Sydney while the work on the Liturgy was being finished was useful and timely. He put before us the needs and the outlook of a country which is not much tied to tradition. (18)

The later development of the Church comes more within the range of knowledge of our members and clergy in the large number of countries in which it is now at work. How much it has meant in the lives of numbers of people there are many to testify. It may be small so far as membership is reckoned in terms of numbers, but it makes its own distinctive contribution within the fellowship of Christian churches and serves its own good and intrinsic purpose as an instrument in the service of our common Lord and Master.
